Prologue

Two sets of large, innocent eyes watched on in curiosity as they watched the fluffy, green-haired teen carry a large box into the commons room and set it on the coffee table. Being the small children that they were, they rushed over to see what mysteries the box held, putting their little play date on hold for the moment.

"What's with the box, Izuku?" asked Kyouka, as she and the frog girl of the class also came over in curiosity. This also caught the attention of the others.

With a smile on his face, the greenie opened the box and started digging through it. "Just some Pre-Quirk Era animated movies."

Pulling out the movies, Tsuyu took note of the one thing the movies had in common.

"Disney, gero?"

"Hai. Before they went bankrupt over some... questionable decisions, Disney was well known for their great animations and I thought Eri-chan and Satsuki-chan would like to watch them."

Looking down at the little girls, who were currently on their tiptoes so they could peek into the box, Kyouka spoke up. "So how about it, Eri? Want to watch some movies with Papa and me?"

The unicorn turned to Mama with a big smile. "Hai!"

"What about you, Satsuki? Do you want to watch the movies, too, gero?" asked Tsuyu, looking at her baby sister.

"Hai, gero!" squeaked out the tadpole, just as excited as Eri was.

The two six-year-olds then ran over to and climbed onto the couch, ready for movie time. Of course, because the rest of Class 1-A overheard everything, they wanted in.

"Sweet! Movie marathon! Gather the snacks, everyone!" declared the fluffy alien of the class as most of the others cheered in agreement.

There was always one to bring things down, though. "Che, why the hell would I want to watch baby movies?!"

"Ah come on, Baku-bro! These movies can't be that bad. Besides, look how excited Eri-chan and Satsuki-chan are!" exclaimed Kirishima with a sharp-toothed grin as he dragged the growling Pomeranian over to the seating area.

After getting their snacks and drinks, most of the class sat on the floor, ready for Midoriya to start the movie. On the large couch, Eri and Satsuki sat between Kyouka and Tsuyu. On the small couch, sat Shouto, Momo, and Tokoyami.

Once everyone was settled, Izuku popped in the first movie and then went over to sit next to Kyouka before pointing the remote at the TV.

Time to start the show.

PROLOGUE END

This story is the 30 th entry in "The Smiling Family" series and it's going to be a multi-chapter story. Watch as Eri and her best friend Satsuki enjoy some classic Disney. Of course the chapters won't be about them actually watching the movies, but their reactions afterwards. And just for fun, try and guess what the first Disney movie will be (Pixar movies count).

And just a reminder for readers on FanFiction, if you haven't already, to reactivate email opt-in so you'll be able to be notified when a story gets updated.

Beauty and the Beast

"I question how I was convinced to partake in this activity."

A gasp came from one of the other newcomers. "Shishida! Are you saying you would willingly deny the request of two innocent, baby princesses?"

"That's not what I meant, Lady Tokage," replied the beastly member of Class 1-B with a slight growl as the lizard-like girl grinned. "I'm just surprised that they requested my assistance."

"Assistance? They asked you to dance with them," replied Honenuki, giving his best smirk, despite his lack of lips.

Looking over at the little ones, the Class 1-B students saw Eri and Satsuki dressed in princess dresses, ready to dance with the Beast just like in the movie.

The first movie Izuku showed the girls was Beauty and the Beast, after which the girls excitedly wanted to meet and dance with a beast just like Belle did. Izuku, Kyouka, and Tsuyu weren't exactly sure how they were going to fulfill this request, but then Kaminari surprisingly made a good suggestion.

" Doesn't Class 1-B have someone who's an actual beast?"

As much as he wanted to make Eri happy, Izuku was hesitant on bothering Shishida with such a request. Kyouka on the other hand didn't have such hesitation and called up Setsuna to have her send Shishida over and why. Of course this meant some of the other members of Class 1-B had to come over as well since there was no way Setsuna was going to miss this.

"I think it's cute!" squeaked out Pony with a giggle.

"Yeah! Come on, Shishida! Make the kids happy!" exclaimed Tetsutetsu with a sharp-toothed grin.

"Especially so we can record it!" added Setsuna, holding up her phone. She wasn't the only one as Mina and Hagakure also had their phones ready.

"I did not agree to being recorded!" yelled out Shishida, glaring at his classmate. He then turned to the class president. "Please make her stop, Lady Kendou!"

But the orange-haired martial artist just gave an apologetic look. "Sorry, Shishida, but you know how Setsuna can get. Besides, Kyouka and Tsu are going to record this anyway since it involves the little ones."

Shishida could only hang his head in defeat before glancing over at the little girls, who looked back at him in confusion and anticipation. Seeing that they would most likely be heartbroken if he refused, Shishida let out a sigh of resignation and gave them a friendly smile.

"Then I suppose we should begin the dance."

With cheers, Eri and Satsuki excitedly ran over to Shishida. Given the height difference between the girls and Shishida, the girls each stood on one of Shishida's feet and held onto his hands so they wouldn't fall. Once they were in position, Izuku started the music.

As the music played, Shishida did his best to keep up. Even though the waltz was an easy dance to do, he was carrying two little passengers on his feet, so he would make do to make the little ones happy.

Once the waltz finished, Eri and Satsuki stepped off of Shishida's feet and he gave them a gentlemanly bow while they curtsied in return, after which they giggled and ran over to their respective guardians.

"Mama! Papa! Did you see us dance?" squeaked out Eri, her eyes shining in happiness.

Izuku let out a chuckle as he reached down and patted his daughter on the head. "Yes we did, Eri, and it was very pretty. Mama even got it on video."

"Neechan! Neechan! Did you watch, too, gero?" asked Satsuki, hopping up and down in excitement.

"Of course I did, Satsuki, and you were very good at dancing, gero. I'm going to send Kaasan and Otousan the video of your dance so they can see it, too, gero," replied Tsuyu, giving her baby sister a smile.

The little ones continued to chatter and babble about how fun it was to dance with Shishida, much to the amusement of most of the teens.

"So what's the next movie we'll be watching?" asked Setsuna, catching everyone's attention.

"H-Huh?" stuttered out Izuku.

The lizard girl put her hands on her hips with a pout. "What? You invite some of us over and not expect us to want to stay for your little movie marathon?"

"Setsuna, you can't just invite yourself over like that," said Itsuka, pinching the bridge of her nose in frustration over her friend's behavior.

"In fairness, we're already here even though Class 1-A only asked for Shishida," replied Honenuki.

"That doesn't mean we can just insert ourselves here!"

"Um, I think I can speak for most of us in saying that we don't mind you staying," stated Izuku, being his usual friendly self.

"Izuku's right. That and I'm sure Eri doesn't mind you guys staying," added Kyouka.

This was proven when Eri made her way over to Pony and tugged on her shirt. "Pony-obachan! Papa got a bunch of apples for me today!"

"He did?" gasped out the equestrian girl with a giggle, playing along. "Would you like to share them with me?"

"Fumi-ojichan gets one, too," replied the unicorn as she started pulling the giggling Pony towards the kitchen. Satsuki followed after in the hopes of getting a jelly cup.

"Well, looks like we're staying!" exclaimed Setsuna with a lizard-like grin, while Itsuka let out a defeated sigh. She then opened up her contacts on her phone. "Let me just invite the others and the movie marathon can continue."

"Tell Monoma that I'll jab him in the eye if he starts anything," said Kyouka, her earphone jacks looking like vipers.

"I'm almost tempted to rile him up on purpose," replied the lizard girl, her grin widening as the rocker girl rolled her eyes in response.

With the rest of Class 1-B informed about what was going on, Izuku got the next movie ready for Eri and Satsuki.

CHAPTER END

Congrats to haolong324 on AO3 for being the only one who guessed Beauty and the Beast as the first Disney movie Eri and Satsuki got to see. Class 1-B also makes their appearance as the baby children wanted to dance with UA's resident beast like Belle did.

Guesses are now reset, so make your guesses on what the next movie will be. I'm hoping to update this story once a week so everyone can get their guesses in.

The Lion King

It didn't take much to set Bakugou off, especially if he thought someone was looking down on him.

"What the hell are you brats looking at?!" demanded the always-angry boy, letting off a few pops from his palms. He was currently having a glaring contest with Eri and Satsuki, who were both giving him narrowed looks as they were latched protectively onto Izuku's legs.

"Try it and see how far you get, Bakugou," stated Kyouka with a glare of her own as she and Tsuyu were more than ready to throw down if Bakugou went anywhere near the little ones.

Bakugou let out a growl while behind him Setsuna just rolled her eyes.

"Isn't it obvious, Bomb Boy, especially after the movie we just watched?" questioned the lizard girl, a smirk on her face.

"How the hell does a stupid lion movie make it obvious?!"

"You need to pay more attention, Bomb Boy~ The little ones see you as the evil uncle Scar while Midoriya is Mufasa and they think you'll pull a "long live the king" on Midoriya," explained Setsuna with a grin, knowing the reaction Bakugou will have.

"Like hell I'm a villain!"

"Pretty hard to tell with the way you act most of the time, gero," replied Tsuyu in her signature blunt way.

"You want a piece of me, Frogger?!" yelled out the rabid boy, setting off more pops from his palms.

"Not really helping your case, Baku-bro!" called out Kirishima.

"Man, he really hasn't changed since the Sports Festival, has he?" questioned Tetsutetsu, standing next to Kirishima.

"How sinful," came the remark from Shiozaki.

"It's no surprise that scum of Class 1-A is like this!" exclaimed Monoma before Itsuka silenced him.

This all only served to increase Bakugou's anger. It didn't help that Kaminari and Sero kept egging him on.

Ignoring the walking time bomb for now, Kyouka turned to speak with Eri. "Sweetie, you don't need to worry about what the Pomeranian will do. Papa's real strong and a true hero, remember?"

"Hai, but Kitty-san is always mean to Papa," replied Eri with a frown.

"And what if Kitty-san starts being mean to Neechan, gero?!" asked Satsuki, worried for Tsuyu's safety.

Before Tsuyu could explain to her baby sister that Bakugou was not a threat to her, a certain idiot of Class 1-B with a tongue fetish decided to get involved.

"Ah, I wouldn't worry, kid. Your sister's pretty skilled, but if you're still worried I can protect her for you!" exclaimed Tsuburaba, gaining Satsuki's attention. He thought that if he got on the tadpole's good side then he could get in with Tsuyu.

But in true Asui fashion...

"No, you're creepy, gero," replied Satsuki, giving Tsuburaba a blank look before turning back to Izuku. Tsuyu felt a swelling of pride for Satsuki.

The declaration caused Tsuburaba to feel as if he got pierced through the heart while being crushed by a massive block of stone as a cloud of depression engulfed him.

"Real smooth, Tsuburaba. Real smooth," stated Kaibara sarcastically while others from Class 1-B couldn't help but laugh at the Solid Air user striking out.

As everyone laughed at Tsuburaba's expense, Satou walked into the commons room from the kitchen carrying a tray of sweets.

"Did I miss something?" questioned the muscular baker.

"Not really, Satou-kun," replied Hagakure. "Hey, what's that you have?"

Placing the tray on the table, Satou happily explained. "It's a dessert I thought Eri and Satsuki would like after watching The Lion King . Dirt Cake with Worms! Basically it's layers of chocolate pudding and crushed chocolate cookies topped with gummy worms."

"Ooh, that sounds so tasty!" squeaked out Mina, her eyes sparkling in want. Next to her stood Ochaco, who was drooling a little at wanting a taste.

"Well I did make more than enough for everyone," replied Satou, pointing back to the kitchen where everyone could see rows upon rows of pudding cups.

"... Satou-kun, we don't deserve you," said Hagakure before she and the others excitedly made their way over to get their treats, where the Class 1-B girls couldn't help but be jealous that the Class 1-A girls got to eat something so delicious all the time.

"Who are you willing to take in a trade for Satou?" demanded Setsuna, very serious.

"As if we'd give him up for anyone or anything," replied Ochaco, sneaking four pudding cups for herself.

While the two sets of students debated on who deserved the sweets more, Kyouka turned to the little ones.

"Ready to try Satou's new treats, sweetie?"

Eri looked at the pudding cups curiously. "It has worms like what the piggy ate."

"Hai, but these worms are okay for little girls to eat, gero," replied Tsuyu as she helped Satsuki onto a chair, while Kyouka did the same with Eri.

Once the girls were settled in, and given bibs to prevent chocolate stains on their clothes, they dug in.

Needless to say, Satou gained two new fans that day.

CHAPTER END

Wargraymon0700 on AO3 was the first to guess The Lion King for this round. Originally this chapter was just going to be about Eri and Satsuki being protective of Izuku, but I combined it with the other idea I had of the little ones being introduced to gummy worms... after wanting to eat real bugs, which was obviously cut out.

Anyway, for the next Disney movie I'm going to give you guys a clue. Mainly because I know for a fact that no one would guess it otherwise. Alright, the clue is "Disney Afternoon".

A Goofy Movie

"Alright, that should do it."

Izuku nodded to himself in satisfaction as he looked at the makeshift tent he made for Eri and Satsuki. Using blankets, tables, and chairs, it was perfect for the little ones' sleepover tonight.

The last movie of the day that Izuku showed Eri and Satsuki just happened to be A Goofy Movie, which resulted in this little campout for the girls. Originally they wanted to go on a real road trip, but school and hero internships wouldn't allow him and Kyouka to take Eri on any long-term trips.

"Not right now, Eri, but one day, I promise. In the meantime, let's have a campout here instead!"

That was what Izuku had said to Eri as he patted her on the head, leading to the current situation.

"But what if we get attacked by Bigfoot like in the movie, gero?!" exclaimed Satsuki, worried.

"Then Mama and Papa will scare him away just like they did with Chisaki!" squeaked out Eri in response.

Kyouka couldn't help but giggle as she listened to Eri. "I guess Bigfoot's lucky then that he doesn't live in Japan."

"Really, gero?" asked Satsuki.

"Really. Now come on you two. Let's get you ready for bed, gero," said Tsuyu as she started leading Satsuki down the hall to the elevator, while Kyouka did the same with Eri.

A few minutes later the unicorn and the tadpole were back down in the commons room with their pajamas on, ready for their sleepover.

They weren't the only ones, though.

"Alright! Let's get this slumber party started!" exclaimed Mina with a grin, earning cheers from Hagakure and Setsuna.

This made the shy rocker let out a sigh. When Izuku suggested a campout for Eri and Satsuki's sleepover, Mina had the brilliant idea to turn it into one big slumber party. All of the girls from both Class 1-A and Class 1-B were here and a few boys from both classes also decided to stay, them being Izuku, Shouto, Tokoyami, Kirishima, Kaminari, Tetsutetsu, Awase, Kaibara, and Tsuburaba (who thought he still had a chance with Tsuyu). Everyone else had retired to their own rooms for the night, especially Bakugou since he outright refused to participate (much to Setsuna's chagrin).

"Mina, was all of this necessary?" demanded Kyouka, giving the fluffy alien a narrowed look.

"Sure it is! It let's Eri and Satsuki experience a real slumber party and since they're pretending to go camping, they can experience s'mores for the first time!" chirped Mina, her grin widening.

The little ones tilted their heads in confusion with Eri asking the question. "S'mores?"

"You two are in for a treat!" squeaked out Hagakure.

"Hopefully we'll have enough," added Setsuna, glancing over towards the couch.

Everyone else turned to the couch where a moan came from Ochaco.

"My stomach hurts," said the anti-gravity girl in slight pain.

"That's what happens when you sneak twenty pudding cups, gero," replied Tsuyu in her blunt way. "It really was a good thing that Satou made more than enough for everyone, gero."

Another moan came from Ochaco followed by a small burp. She did indeed manage to sneak and eat twenty pudding cups earlier, leaving her bloated and beached on the couch.

"... Is she always like this?" asked Awase, concerned for the round-faced brunette.

"Only if we don't keep an eye on her," replied Kaminari.

Leaving Ochaco to her food coma, everyone else got the campout started. Some of the boys decided to play a few rounds of cards, while the girls and the rest of the boys decided to show Eri and Satsuki how to make s'mores, using Shouto as a makeshift campfire.

"Are you sure this is a good idea?" asked the half-and-half boy, holding a small flame in his hand as some of the others used it to roast marshmallows.

"As long as Iida doesn't find out, then yes!" chirped Mina, licking her lips at the thought of chocolaty, marshmallowy goodness.

As the marshmallows roasted Eri, who was sitting on Kyouka's lap, looked up and asked, "Mama, can we go to a concert like in the movie?"

Kyouka pretended to give it some thought. "A concert? I don't know about going to one, but what if my band and I play one for you like at the Cultural Festival? Of course we'd have to practice again for the new songs I'll write up. Would you like that, sweetie?"

"Can Satsuki-chan come, too?" asked Eri as Satsuki, who was sitting on Tsuyu's lap, nodded excitedly.

"Of course she can, sweetie," replied Kyouka, nuzzling her little girl.

"Yay!" cheered the little ones, causing their respective guardians to giggle at their antics.

"Oh this will be so exciting! Last time was so much fun, I was hoping we'd get to play again one day!" squeaked out Momo, her eyes sparkling in anticipation.

"Indeed. I look forward to putting on another performance," added Tokoyami.

"Yeah, but will Kacchan agree to play this time?" asked Kaminari.

"If he doesn't I can think of three reasons that can make him agree," replied Kyouka, glancing at Izuku, Todoroki, and Tokoyami. Bakugou might be one of the strongest students in class, but not even he could beat a team of the other strongest students in class.

"I definitely can't wait to see that concert," stated Setsuna with her lizard-like grin. "Not only do I get to see Bomb Boy bang those drums, but your last concert was way better than that play we put on!"

"Wait, really?" questioned Hagakure, surprised.

"Yeah, although Monoma tried to pass it off that people liked our play more, but it was clear that he rigged that vote," said Kaibara with a shrug.

Kyouka could feel her eye twitch in annoyance. Why was she not surprised one bit?

Soon the s'mores were ready and Eri and Satsuki had another favorite treat to add to their list, although apples and jelly cups were still their number one favorites respectively. After they had their fill, it was time for bed.

"Now remember, you two, if you need anything we'll right outside the tent, okay?" asked Izuku as the little ones got settled.

"Hai!" the two squeaked out.

Once Eri and Satsuki were snuggled under the blankets, it didn't take long for them to drift off to dream land. Smiling at the scene, Izuku then took his leave and got into his own sleeping bag nearby, where he was immediately snuggled by Kyouka.

"You are so good with kids," muttered out Kyouka, nuzzling his chest.

He blushed slightly, but that didn't take the smile off his face as he held her close, kissing the top of her head.

"There are other people here, you two~" came the singsong tone of the fluffy pink one. She and the others were scattered about the commons room with their own sleeping bags.

"Sh-Shut up, Mina," replied the purplette, hiding her blushing face in Izuku's chest.

The other girls just giggled at Kyouka's reaction before everyone settled in for the night with pleasant dreams to come.

CHAPTER END

The Swordslinger on FanFiction and both Silverlink07 and Firem78910 on AO3 guessed it right this time. A Goofy Movie is one of the best Disney movies out there and if you've never seen it, complete with the music video of "Dr. Looney's Remedy" by Pineapple Express that came before it, then you haven't lived.

Keep those guesses coming for what's next, think outside the box, and remember that Pixar movies still count.

Toy Story

Sunday morning came and a lot had to be done before Izuku, Kyouka, and Tsuyu had to head out. The plan for today was to head to the Asui residence to not only take Satsuki home, but it was decided by Inko, Mika, and Beru that everyone would get together there for lunch. This would allow Eri and Satsuki a few more hours to play together. Since it was still a good few hours until then, though, this allowed Eri and Satsuki to get in one more movie before they had to leave.

When they did arrive at the Asui residence that movie resulted in the scene Samidare came upon.

"What are you two doing, gero?" asked the ten-year-old boy, finding the two little girls peeking into Satsuki's room.

Satsuki turned to shush her brother. "Shh, we're waiting for the toys to wake up, gero!"

Samidare looked at his little sister with a blank look before turned to yell down the hall. "Kaasan! I think something's wrong with Satsuki!"

This caused the tadpole to puff out her cheeks in a pout while Eri tilted her head in confusion.

Hearing the call of her son, Beru made her way to where the children were. With her was Inko, who was worried that something had happened to Eri as well. Upon arriving, the two matriarchs saw that the little ones appeared fine, so they were confused as to why Samidare had said otherwise.

"What happened, gero?" questioned Beru.

"They think their toys are alive," replied Samidare, pointing at the little ones.

"We wanted to see them play like in the movie!" squeaked out Eri, pointing at Keiko-san, her killer whale plushy that she got from Kugo-jii recently. She had brought him with her so he could make friends with Satsuki's toys.

The two matriarchs couldn't help but giggle as Inko used her Quirk to lift Eri into her arms, while Beru used her tongue to do the same with Satsuki. They then made their way back to where everyone else was for lunch with Samidare following after.

"And what movie would this be, Eri-chan?" asked Inko, catching everyone's attention.

Eri and Satsuki told them about the movies Izuku was letting them watch, including the most recent one being Toy Story. They even told about the things they did afterwards like dance with a beast, eat gummy worms, and going camping. The teens had to immediately explain to their respective parents that they had a campout in the commons room and that they didn't actually go camping.

Kyouka and Tsuyu then showed Inko, Beru, and Mika the recording they took of the little ones dancing with Shishida, causing them to coo at how adorable it was.

After lunch was eaten, Eri and Satsuki went back to Satsuki's room to see if the toys were awake and playing, only to pout when they found the toys "asleep".

"Why won't they wake up, gero?" questioned Satsuki.

"Remember what the toys did in the movie, Satsuki, gero," said Tsuyu, who had followed after them. "The toys stay asleep whenever there's a human around, gero."

"But the toys were awake with the mean boy around," replied Eri, confused.

"That's because the mean boy hurt their friends and he needed to be taught a lesson, gero. This is why you should always take care of your toys, understood, gero?"

"Hai!" squeaked out the little ones, with Eri picking up Keiko-san and giving him a hug.

Soon it was time for everyone to leave. Mika and Inko thanked Beru for having them over, Toshinori and Kyoutoku shook hands with Ganma, and Satsuki and Samidare gave Tsuyu a goodbye hug before Satsuki did the same with Eri.

The tadpole really wanted to go with her Neechan and keep playing with Eri, but the promise that she could visit again next weekend was enough to pacify her. The little ones now wished that the weekend would come sooner, not only so they could see each other again, but so they also could watch the next movie Izuku had for them.

CHAPTER END

I apologize, this chapter was supposed to be up a lot sooner. But anyway, Haro654 and StrongGuy159 on FanFiction and Stickjumper11 on AO3 made the correct guesses this time. For the next one, I'm going to give you guys another hint 'cause this will be another movie I know people won't even think of otherwise. Your hint: "What cult classic animated Disney film is associated with the Sun?" You guys are going to have to really think for this one, but remember "cult classic" and "the Sun" are the key words here.

Extra points to whoever can guess what "Keiko-san" is a reference to.

The Emperor's New Groove

Kyouka was thankful for many things. Prime examples being having Izuku in her life, having Momo and (especially right now) Kouda as friends, and that Eri was too young to realize the true power that held.

"What was going through that damn head of yours when you decided to set this up?" demanded Aizawa with a hiss as he glared at All Might.

The retired hero just glanced at the younger man with an unimpressed look before looking back at and gaining Eri's attention. "Young Eri, I believe Aizawa-san wishes to tell you something."

The horned child looked over at the insomniac, tilting her head in wonder, but Aizawa could only look at her with a blank look before he pinched the bridge of his nose in frustration.

"Nothing, Eri. It's nothing."

Accepting that, Eri turned back to the large wooly animal that Toshi-jii had gotten for her and Satsuki-chan!

"You just can't say no to Eri-chan, can you, Shouta?" questioned Present Mic with a grin, earning a glare from Aizawa.

"I'm just surprised that the little ones wanted a llama of all things," stated Midnight. She then turned to All Might. "How did you even manage to find a llama in Japan anyway?"

It was Saturday again and once classes had ended, Satsuki had come to the dorms for another play date with Eri and to watch more Disney movies with the first one today being one called The Emperor's New Groove. As a result from watching the wacky adventure, Eri and Satsuki wanted to see a real life llama, so they asked Izuku if he could get them a llama to play with. Of course both Kyouka and Tsuyu were against this, but Izuku was somehow able to convince them that it would be okay since llamas are domesticated animals and Kouda could use his Quirk to keep the llama calm should it get antsy.

The only real problem was where and how to get a llama for the little ones. To this, Izuku went to All Might for help and explained the situation. Needless to say, wanting to be the doting grandpa, Toshinori used his connections to find the llama. It was both amusing and terrifying how Eri unknowingly had these Pros wrapped around her little finger.

"Thank you, Toshi-jii!" squeaked out Eri with a smile as she hugged the llama.

"Hai! Thank you, Eri's Toshi-jii, gero!" added Satsuki, also hugging the llama.

Toshinori returned the smile, happy that the little ones were happy.

As Eri and Satsuki played with the llama, with Kouda supervising, Kyouka and Tsuyu turned to Izuku.

"You do realize that this will not end well, right, Izuku?" questioned Kyouka, putting a hand on her hip.

"But Kouda will prevent the llama from doing anything," replied the greenie, confused.

"Hai, but who will prevent Bakugou from doing anything, gero?" asked Tsuyu, tilting her head slightly. "Remember when he tried to attack that emu you saved a while back, gero?"

"You want to start something, Frogger?!"

Ignoring Bakugou, Class 1-A discussed how they'd deal with the llama while Class 1-B were still trying to process the fact that Bakugou tried to attack an animal and the teachers were planning on having Bakugou get some much needed therapy.

As for Eri and Satsuki, they completely forgot about the other Disney movies they were going to watch today and focused solely on the llama, riding and playing with it until it was time for bed. All's well that ends well for everyone...

"Before I forget, UA technically owns this llama now."

"... I hate you so much right now, All Might. I hate you so much."

Poor (not really) Aizawa.

CHAPTER END

Haro654 & Noctfoxhero on FanFiction and MetaRunning & Visionary0 on AO3 guessed it right this time. This one actually gave me some trouble. Of the Disney films I have planned for this story, I had an idea of what I wanted Eri and Satsuki to do once they watched them, but what exactly could you have done for The Emperor's New Groove ? Apparently have Toshinori get them a pet llama, much to Aizawa's annoyance.

Next film requires another hint, so have "many adventures" trying to guess what's to come.

The Many Adventures of Winnie the Pooh

It was a bright and sunny Sunday morning as Kouda was currently in the newly built stable, brushing the llama that UA apparently now owned. He and his classmates were surprised when they learned that UA would be keeping the llama, despite the fact that All Might only got it for Eri and Satsuki, but there really wasn't anywhere the llama could go.

Not that Principal Nezu had a problem with the animal being here. He had said that llama were a good representation of Plus Ultra, calling them "nature's greatest warrior". None of the students understood what that meant, but judging by the blank look on Midoriya's face he did.

Speaking of Midoriya, Kouda looked over towards the open field and couldn't help but smile as Midoriya taught Eri and Satsuki how to fly kites.

Earlier, Midoriya had shown the little ones The Many Adventures of Winnie the Pooh (Kouda's favorite so far because of how pure it is) and the little ones had wanted to fly kites just like how Pooh Bear did. The only problem was that there was no breeze today, so it would have been impossible to fly kites. That was until Todoroki came to the rescue.

"I have an idea," was what he had said as he pulled out his cellphone and made a call.

The others weren't sure what he was planning, but twenty minutes later they got their answer in a very loud way.

"Todoroki! I am here to help!" yelled out the newcomer with a grin on his face.

And that was how Yoarashi Inasa was roped into Eri and Satsuki's play date, much to Bakugou's annoyance. Although Shouto was curious as to why Utsushimi Camie was here, too.

"When Yoarashi said he was going to visit you, Todoroki-kun, I just had to come with him," answered Camie with a flirty smile. "Of course we had to, like, make sure Shishikura didn't find out or he'd ruin everything."

Being the oblivious boy that he was, Shouto just nodded in acceptance. Momo on the other hand gave Camie a suspicious look, while Izuku and Kyouka just glanced at each other, wondering if this was a good idea.

That changed when Inasa used his Quirk to create a breeze that would allow the little ones to fly their kites.

"Look how high they are, Papa!" squeaked out Eri with a giggle.

Hearing what Eri called Izuku, Inasa and Camie became confused. When Izuku explained to them how and why Eri came to calling him "Papa" and in turn Kyouka "Mama", though, Inasa gained so much respect for Izuku while Camie giggled.

"That's so cute!" chirped Camie. She then looked between Izuku, Satsuki, and Tsuyu before landing back on Satsuki. "So, like, is this little one yours, too, Midoriya-kun?"

"This is my sister," replied Tsuyu in a blunt deadpan, knowing what was going on in the older girl's head. Satsuki and Eri just tilted their heads in curiosity, while Izuku blushed up a storm at the implication and Kyouka's eye twitched in annoyance. It didn't help that some of their classmates (Mina, Tooru, Setsuna, Kaminari, Sero) were laughing at their expense.

Eri and Satsuki continued to fly their kites with Inasa's help and even some of Class 1-A and 1-B decided they wanted to fly kites as well.

As the teens and two little ones continued to enjoy their fun, Satou came outside carrying a large tray of cupcakes.

"Hey, everyone! Snack time!" called out the muscular baker.

"Yes! More of Satou-kun's sweets!" cheered Hagakure as she and a few others reeled in their kites so they could have a treat. "What did you make this time?"

"The movie gave me the idea to make something with honey, so I settled on honey cupcakes with a honey buttercream frosting," he explained.

Most of the girls couldn't help but drool slightly at the taste they were about to experience, much to some of the boys amusement. Seeing the girls' reactions, Camie grew curious.

"Are these cupcakes, like really that good?"

"Try one and find out!" exclaimed Mina, handing one over to the older girl.

When Camie took a bite out of the pastry, she couldn't help but moan in delight. "How can something taste so heavenly?"

"None can resist Satou-kun's baking prowess!" chirped Hagakure with a giggle.

As Camie and the UA girls praised Satou, much to his embarrassment, the little ones got to have a taste of the pastries as well.

"So how does it taste, sweetie?" asked Kyouka, giving her child a kind smile.

"It's sweet!" squeaked out Eri with her own happy smile.

"And fluffy, gero!" added Satsuki.

"I'm sure Satou will be glad to hear that, gero," replied Tsuyu with a few giggling croaks.

The teens continued to enjoy the cupcakes made by Satou, but eventually they started running low.

"You made more, right, Satou-kun?" asked Mina, looking hopeful.

"Yup! The extra batches are on the kitchen counter."

"Uh, guys? Has anyone seen Uraraka by chance?" questioned Sero, not seeing the anti-gravity girl anywhere.

It was silent as the rest of the UA students realized that the round-faced brunette was missing and it didn't take long for them to think of where she could have gone. A majority of them rushed into the dorm to stop her before she ate too many of the cupcakes.

"What's going on, Mama?" asked Eri, she and Satsuki looking up at the purplette for answers.

"Let me put it this way, Eri. Uraraka-san had a big craving for honey just like Winnie the Pooh did and everyone else doesn't want her to get sick from eating too much."

"Oh... Can Satsuki-chan and I keep flying our kites?"

' Oh to be young and easily distracted,' thought Kyouka. "As long as there's a breeze to help fly them."

"Ha! Leave it to me!" exclaimed Inasa, kicking up a gentle wind once more for the little ones.

"Yay!" cheered Eri and Satsuki.

They released their kites into the sky and flew them happily under the supervision of their respective guardians and the Shiketsu students while everyone else had to defend the cupcakes from a hungry Ocho.

CHAPTER END

Sorry that this is late. Last week was not a good time, irl. I had to take my cat, who will be twenty this year, to the vet three times last week and I needed to focus on his recovery. He's doing a lot better now, but it was still a scary moment seeing him in such a state beforehand.

Anyway, most of you guessed right with The Many Adventures of Winnie the Pooh , but special shout out to LordoftheSwamp1269 on Fanfiction for actually guessing what exactly I was planning with this chapter. No hint for the next chapter, since I'm sure at least one person will guess it since it's a popular Disney classic.

Lilo & Stitch

"Wh-Why are we doing this again?"

"Because Eri and Satsuki wanted to, Ochaco-chan!"

"But why are WE doing this, Mina? I don't feel comfortable in this outfit!"

"Ochaco-chan, I'm not saying this to be mean since you're my friend, but this is why you shouldn't eat so many sweets at a time, gero."

The anti-gravity girl at least had the decency to blush in embarrassment. Before the others managed to drag her away from the honey cupcakes that Satou made, she scarfed down at least a dozen of them, leaving her once again bloated and full. She really needed to get her gluttony under control when it came to free food.

What made it worse for her was the activity Eri and Satsuki wanted to do this time.

"Mama, can we start the hula lessons now?" asked the unicorn child with a squeak.

The next movie Izuku had the little ones watch after flying kites was Lilo & Stitch, after which the little ones wanted to learn how to hula dance like Lilo. This then led Mina to convince all of the girls that they should join in as well for Eri and Satsuki's sake.

Which was why the Class 1-A girls, Class 1-B girls, Camie, and the little ones were out by the school pool, now wearing grass skirts (with shorts underneath for decency), bikini or tube tops, and flowery leis and crowns to add to the Hawaiian theme. Hence why Ochaco was uncomfortable as the results of her sweet tooth were on full display to the boys.

Speaking of the boys...

"This is the greatest day ever!" said Mineta as he whispered awe as drool came out of his mouth and blood came out of his nose. He was enjoying the sight of the girls, especially Momo and Camie, in skimpy outfits. Off to the side, Tsuburaba was discreetly making glances towards Tsuyu, a slight blush on his face.

Most of the other boys just rolled their eyes, used to Mineta's antics, while Iida admonished him for treating their female classmates as mere objects.

"It is sinful for us to show this much skin," stated Shiozaki as the girls watched the grape get yelled at for being lustful.

"Ah, don't be like that, Ibara! A little eye candy for the boys won't hurt anybody. In fact..." started Setsuna before she turned towards Bakugou with a flirty, lizard-like grin and posed. "Like what you see, Bomb Boy~"

But Bakugou just scoffed and gave her a glare. "Why the hell would I care about something like this?!"

"Because even you would have to have a type... unless the rumors about you and Kirishima are true~" replied Setsuna, her grin widening.

"What?!" yelled out the ashy blond, setting off a few small explosions.

With Kirishima, he had a slight blush on his face as he rubbed the back of his head. "I'm flattered and all, Baku-bro, but I don't swing that way."

"Shut the hell up, Shitty Hair!"

As Bakugou had a one-sided argument with Kirishima with some of the other boys laughing at him, Kyouka gave Setsuna a blank look.

"Did you really have to set him off like that?" questioned the purplette.

"Yup! Maybe this will make Bomb Boy take the initiative and look my way," said Setsuna. She then gave Kyouka a smirk. "Sort of like what Midoriya's doing to you right now~"

"H-Huh?" stuttered out Kyouka. When she turned to look at her boyfriend, she found that all of his focus was directly on her. Blushing slightly, she called out to him. "I-Izu-kun?"

The greenie snapped out of his trance and then looked away with a blush of his own. "S-Sorry, K-Kyouka. I w-was d-distracted."

Kyouka's blush brightened and she started tapping her earphone jacks together in a shy manner when she realized that Izuku was basically ogling her. Her blush got even worse when Mina, Setsuna, and Tooru started giggling and cooing, saying how cute she and Izuku were.

"Maybe we should start the hula lessons now, gero," said Tsuyu, trying to help Kyouka by changing the subject.

"H-Hai! L-Let's get started!" squeaked out Kyouka, trying to calm her beating heart.

With cheers from Eri and Satsuki the dance lessons started. The Hawaiian music played as Mina, being the dance expert, did her best to teach the hula to the other girls. Some, like Momo, Camie, and surprisingly Itsuka and Ibara, got the hang of it pretty quickly, while it took more than a few tries for some of the other girls. The two chibis on the other hand were giggling and just having fun as they tried to hula.

When they were done, Mina gave the little ones a beaming grin. "Not bad, you two! You did really well for your first try!"

The chibis beamed at the praise, ready for the next lesson. Before that could happen though...

"What is going on here?"

Turning to where the exasperated voice came from, the large group of teens saw Aizawa-sensei giving them a narrowed eye look. Behind him stood Izuku, Kyouka, and Tsuyu's respective parents, all of whom were wondering why the girls were dressed the way they were, although Kyoutoku and Ganma were ready to take down any of the boys that tried anything with their daughters.

"Kaachan, gero!" chirped Satsuki, making her way towards her parents, while Eri made her way to her grandparents.

"Mika-baa! Guess what we did today!" exclaimed Eri as she was scooped up into the musical matriarch's arms. "We learned how to hula!"

Letting out a few giggles at how cute her granddaughter was, Mika replied. "Is that right?"

"Hai! And Toshi-jii even got us a llama yesterday!" added Eri, pointing at a nearby field.

The parents blinked in confusion before looking at where Eri was pointing to find that there was indeed a llama grazing on the grass.

"We named him Fluffy-chan, gero!" stated Satsuki with a giggly croak.

The parents continued to try and comprehend what they were seeing before turning to the retired hero, who at least had the decency to look sheepish.

"They really wanted to see a llama yesterday," he said.

At this Inko let out a loving sigh. "Oh, Toshi."

"Did you really have to get Eri a llama, though? How am I supposed to compete with that?!" complained Kyoutoku, which only made Mika roll her eyes.

Ganma then let out a grumbling croak. "I really hope Satsuki hasn't gotten attached to it. There's no way we're bringing it home, gero."

"I'm sure the llama will remain here at UA, Ganma, gero," replied Beru, reassuring her husband.

The little ones then took over the discussion, talking about how they did well on their first hula lesson and wanted to take more lessons. Since there was still some time before Satsuki had to go home, the parents decided on letting the little ones do one more dance routine so they could watch.

"You heard them, girls! Let's get dancing!" exclaimed Mina as Eri and Satsuki got into position.

"You better not say anything, Old Man!" added Kyouka, glaring at her father before they started.

In the end, the girls put on a really great show with Eri and Satsuki having approved slightly as the dance went on. The parents applauded, praising how well the little ones did, earning beaming smiles in return.

Another weekend done. What could next weekend bring for Eri and Satsuki?

CHAPTER END

I really hate not being able to get chapters out when they're supposed to.

BeserkerJ12 on FanFiction made the correct guess this time, guessing Lilo & Stitch . Next Disney movie that Eri and Satsuki will see is one of my all time favorites. It also kinda fits here 'cause Izuku and Kyouka are a lot like the Disney couple from said movie.

Also, I'm surprised that no one caught the Gravity Falls reference last chapter.

Hercules

"Papa is just like Herc-san!"

All of the teens of 1-A and 1-B turned to where the little ones were upon hearing what Eri had said. They all had just finished watching Hercules and it seemed that Eri had an epiphany.

"What do you mean, gero?" asked Satsuki, tilting her head in confusion.

"Papa is really strong just like Herc-san!" squeaked out the unicorn child with a beaming smile, causing Izuku to blush at the praise. "And Mama is sassy like Meg-san!"

Kyouka arched an eyebrow at hearing this. "Eri, sweetie, where did you hear the word "sassy" from?"

"That's what the alien lady says you are, Mama," replied the child, her big, red eyes filled with innocence.

The purplette turned with a mild glare to the pink one, who in turn just gave off a slight grin.

"You know it's true, Kyouka-chan~"

"Whether it's true or not is not the point, Mina. The point is you keeping saying things in front of Eri without explaining what they mean," stated the shy rocker. "Like the time you said that Kirishima is a red version of Izuku..."

"Which he is and Midori is a green version of Kiri!"

"... Only for Eri to think she had two Papas because of that," finished Kyouka.

"Wait, what?" questioned the green and red cinnamon rolls of Class 1-A. This was the first they heard of this.

"Never mind that," came the quick reply from Kyouka with a slight blush. She then continued on. "Just try to pay attention to what you say in front of Eri, Mina."

"You got it, Kyouka-chan!" replied Mina with a salute.

For some reason, Kyouka knew Mina would forget.

While Kyouka dealt with Mina, the little ones went over to where Izuku was.

"Are you really super strong, Izu-nii, gero?"

Not being the type to brag, Izuku tried to stutter out an answer that didn't make it seem like he was all that good. Some of his classmates thought otherwise.

"You bet Midori-bro is strong!" exclaimed Kirishima with a sharp-toothed grin, while next to him stood Bakugou with a scowl. "He's super manly and kicks lots of villain butt!"

"Indeed. There have been many situations we have been in that we would not have won if it were not for Midoriya," added Tokoyami.

"I wouldn't even be where I'm at if it weren't for Midoriya's help," stated Shouto as he looked at his left hand.

"And it all started with Izuku cleaning the beach back home," said Kyouka with smirk, having overheard the conversation.

The others looked at the purplette in confusion, while Izuku tensed up.

"K-Kyouka, wh-what are you doing? I didn't tell you about that so you can brag!" squeaked out the greenie.

But Kyouka just rolled her eyes. "It's not bragging, Izu-kun. Think of it as part of your origin story."

Izuku let out a groan as the others looked back and forth between him and Kyouka.

"So wait, what's this about a beach?" asked Awase.

Seeing as how Izuku was going to talk, Kyouka decided to explain in his stead. "There's a beach back home, Takoba Beach, that became a dumping ground for scrap metal and other pieces of trash."

"Hm, I remember that and it was finally cleaned earlier in the year," said Tokoyami with a hum. He then turned to Izuku. "I assume you are the reason for that?"

Letting out a sigh, Izuku explained. "H-Hai. Cleaning the beach was the training I did before the UA entrance exams."

"And you cleaned it all by yourself?" questioned Kaminari in awe.

"H-Hai."

"And because of that training, Izu-kun can lift over a thousand pounds without his Quirk," said Kyouka with a slight grin. Was she bragging now? Maybe, but she didn't care. She was proud of her man and she was going to show it, damn it.

Izuku blushed brightly as everyone else stared at him with wide eyes, although Bakugou was gritting his teeth in anger and frustration.

"Dude, seriously?! Sounds like you could give Shouji a run for his money!" exclaimed Sero, impressed

"Shishida, too!" added Tetsutetsu, just as impressed.

"Ooh! You need to show us your lifting game, Midoriya!" chirped Hagakure, bouncing slightly in excitement.

"Wh-What? H-How am I supposed to do that here?!" questioned Izuku, hoping to get out of this situation.

"I know!" said Mina with a grin. She then grabbed Kyouka and Tsuyu and dragged them towards the couch, ignoring their confusion. Once at the couch, where Pony and Reiko were already sitting, she sat them down before taking a seat herself. "Try lifting the couch with the five of us on it! Should be a breeze for someone as strong as you!"

The greenie tried to sputter out protests, but Kyouka had other ideas.

"Just do it, Izuku, if only to get Mina off your back."

With another sigh, Izuku walked over and stepped behind the couch where he then, without his Quirk, effortlessly lifted up the occupied couch and held it over his head, much to everyone's shock. Squeaks of excitement came from Eri and Satsuki upon seeing this feat and they would have rushed over to Izuku had Shouji not quickly scooped them up so they wouldn't be in harm's way.

"Wow! Izuku really IS strong!" squeaked Pony with a giggle.

"Hai, it is quite impressive," stated Reiko, putting her hand on her chest where she could feel her heartbeat speed up a little. "It is almost as if Midoriya-kun completed his own set of labors like Hercules did."

"Told you it would be easy for Midori!"

But Tsuyu just rolled her eyes. "No one said you'd be wrong, Mina, gero."

"How are you doing down there, Izu-kun?" asked Kyouka.

"I'm fine, although I do have one concern."

The shy rocker furrowed her brow. "What would that be?"

"Have you girls been getting enough to eat? If it weren't for the fact that I know you're all up there, I would think I was holding up just the couch," said Izuku with worry, causing all five girls to blush at his inadvertent compliment.

' How the hell is he so smooth?!' thought a majority of the boys, looking at Izuku with blank looks. Mineta on the other hand was frothing from the mouth at how Izuku was better at getting women's attention than he was.

"Why did Midori have to be an only child?" muttered out Mina, her now lilac cheeks burning.

"You're a very lucky woman, Jirou," said Reiko, glancing at the bright red rocker next to her. The other girls couldn't help but agree with the ghost girl's assessment.

"I-Izu-kun, you c-can set us d-down n-now!" Kyouka said with a stutter.

Complying with his girlfriend's wishes, Izuku gently set the couch down, allowing the girls to stand. Once on the ground, Kyouka quickly made her way over to Izuku and brought him into a hug.

"Wh-What's this for?" asked the greenie, surprised by the sudden hug, but returning it nonetheless.

"Just for being you," replied the purplette, snuggling into his embrace.

Kyouka continued to snuggle with her greenie, while Eri and Satsuki rushed over and chirped and babbled about how strong Izuku was and how he could scare off all of the scary villains. While that was going on, Mina and the other girls were giving the boys narrowed looks, causing them to shirk back in fear.

"You boys could really learn a thing or two from Midori when it comes to girls!"

The boys could only groan in exasperation at being put on the spot thanks to an unknowing Izuku.

CHAPTER END

A majority of you guessed correctly when you guessed Hercules . For the next Disney movie, here's a clue: Aizawa and Shinsou would really like this movie.

And despite the events in this chapter, Izuku will still be a one-woman man.

The Aristocats

"How did I get dragged into this?"

"Because you and Aizawa-sensei share the same weakness to cats and anything cute. So when Eri asked if you wanted to watch The Aristocats with us, you two already lost the fight, Shinsou."

Both insomniacs scowled at the rocker girl's words and smirk. Of course the scowls had little effect due to the whisker marks on their faces.

After watching the movie, Eri and Satsuki became obsessed with the song "Ev'rybody Wants to Be a Cat" and as a result they wanted to draw whiskers on everyone. So now everyone within the Hero Course would soon look like cats thanks to the chibis.

"They suit you, Shouta," said the whisker-faced Present Mic with a Cheshire grin.

"Yeah, now you live out your dream of being a lazy house cat," added the whisker-faced Midnight, also with a Cheshire grin.

Aizawa glared at them. "Why are you two even here?"

"We were there when Eri-chan asked if you wanted to watch the cat movie, Shouta, and then she asked us if we wanted to watch it as well," stated Present Mic.

"And how could we say no to Eri-chan," cooed Midnight, much to Aizawa's annoyance.

While Aizawa suffered, Eri and Satsuki continued on their mission to draw whiskers on everyone.

"Now you really do look like a kitty, Kitty-san!" squeaked Eri as she and Satsuki giggled after giving Bakugou his whiskers.

It took everything Bakugou had not to scowl since he didn't want to upset Eri and having Inko-obachan finding out. Although he did glare at the Bakusquad when he heard them trying and failing to keep their laughs in check.

The little ones then moved on to the next teens, only to become confused as they looked at Tokoyami and Kuroiro and then at the black markers in their hands, wondering how they were going to draw whiskers.

"Here, Eri-chan, Satsuki-chan. These should work much better," said Momo as she handed the children white markers.

"Thank you, Momo-obachan!" chirped Eri, unknowingly causing Momo's cat-like eyes to sparkle at how cute she was.

"I feel that this is a betrayal to the darkness," stated Kuroiro as Satsuki started drawing whiskers on his face.

"I have learned that some light is acceptable," replied Tokoyami as Eri did the same to his face.

Eventually, everyone now had whiskers on their faces (or in Shouji's case, his mask) and the little ones were proud of their work.

"Do you like them, Neechan, gero?" asked Satsuki, looking at Tsuyu in anticipation.

"They're lovely, Satsuki. Thank you, gero," replied the older frog girl, giving her little sister a smile and getting one in return.

"Mama, can we get a kitty?" asked Eri, looking up at Kyouka with hope.

Kyouka pretended to give it some thought. "I don't know, Eri. You and Satsuki already have Fluffy-chan. Plus, there's always the chance that Aizawa-sensei and Shinsou might steal the kitty."

This earned the rocker girl more glares from the insomniacs and laughs from Present Mic and Midnight.

"Not only that, but a school is not a good place for a cat. They need a good, proper home, gero," added Tsuyu.

At these words, Satsuki's eyes lit up as she grabbed Tsuyu's phone and then dialed a number she knew by heart.

"Otouchan! Neechan said we're getting a kitty, gero!" said Satsuki when the call went through, only for Tsuyu to quickly snatch the phone away.

As Tsuyu tried to explain to her father what was going on, while also ignoring the annoyed tadpole noises, Izuku had a worried look on his face.

"I hope Tsuyu doesn't get in trouble for this."

"Considering Tsuyu's folks are more understanding than most people out there, I'm sure she'll be fine, Izu-kun," replied Kyouka, reassuring her boyfriend.

Izuku nodded, accepting that. With that worry put to rest, he now had to try and convince Eri that they couldn't get a kitty right now. This was actually easy to do as all he had to do was tell her that she could just play with any of the kitties in Aizawa-sensei's care.

And once again, Aizawa was powerless to say no to the baby unicorn.

CHAPTER END

If you've read the latest episode of "Phantom Rocker: World Tour", i.e. the latest three chapters, you'll know why it took so long to get this chapter out.

Anyway, a lot of you were right in guessing The Aristocats as the next Disney movie. The next movie is one of my personal favorite Disney movies and it will make you stop in motion due to fear.

The Nightmare Before Christmas

Aizawa had just finished washing his face, ridding himself of the whisker marks that Eri had drawn on him earlier in the day. He would have done it much sooner, but Hizashi and Nemuri thought it would be funny to parade him around campus to the amusement of the rest of the staff.

He vowed revenge.

Before he could start planning his revenge though, a knock came from his door. He narrowed his eyes at the door since the knock was soft and sounded like it came from the bottom. Getting on guard for another possible prank from Hizashi, he went over to the door and opened it.

"Trick or Treat, gero/Happy Holidays!"

Aizawa looked down with a blank look, finding Satsuki and Eri standing before him, holding open pillow cases filled with candy. The children were even dressed in costumes, with Satsuki as a ghoulish nurse and Eri as a little ghost. Where they even got those costumes was a mystery and Aizawa was sure he didn't want to solve it.

Glaring over at the teenagers standing off to the side, the Erasure Hero demanded answers.

"What did you do, Problem Child?"

"Considering how Jirou and I are also in on this, Sensei, it seems unfair to put all of the blame on Midoriya-chan, gero," replied Tsuyu in her signature blunt way.

"And to answer your question, the girls wanted to go trick or treating after watching the movie they watched," added Kyouka with a smirk, enjoying getting under Aizawa's skin.

After the teachers had left the 1-A dorms, the next movie Izuku showed the children was The Nightmare Before Christmas. Kyouka was a little skeptical considering Eri still gets her holidays mixed up and a movie about both Halloween and Christmas would confuse her even more, but Izuku reassured her that it would be okay. After watching the movie, while Eri still hadn't learned her proper holiday greetings, she and Satsuki instead wanted to do the time-honored Halloween tradition.

"It's not even October," stated Aizawa, wanting this to end. "And where did they even get all of that candy?"

"Our classmates and the other teachers," said Kyouka, her smirk widening slightly. "I called Mic-sensei, asking if he'd be willing to convince the other teachers to do this for Eri and Satsuki, even though it was at the last minute."

"Why wasn't I informed of this?" demanded Aizawa, narrowing his eyes at them.

"Mic-sensei said you would have refused to answer the door if you were, so he thought it was best not to tell you," explained Izuku.

And just like that, Aizawa's need for revenge had become greater. Looking back at the little ones, he grimaced before heading back inside his apartment. He soon returned with an item in each hand and placed them in the candy bags.

"That's all I have, so enjoy," said the insomniac before he closed the door.

The little ones went over to the teens where Kyouka and Tsuyu did not look happy.

"Did he seriously just give them each a can of coffee?" demanded the rocker girl with a scowl.

"Unfortunately, yes, gero," replied the frog girl with a frown.

Luckily, Izuku knew how to fix this as he knelt down before the chibis.

"Eri, Satsuki, I'm going to need you to give me what Aizawa-sensei just gave you."

"How come, Papa?"

"Well, those drinks he gave you are for grown-ups, Eri" explained the greenie with a kind smile. "So how about this? You give me those drinks and in return I'll give you three apples and Satsuki three jelly cups. Would you two like that?"

Seeing as how the little ones' eyes lit up at the mention of their favorite foods, it was clear that they liked it very much.

With the promise of tasty treats, the small group headed back to the dorms where the teens would plan on how to get back at Aizawa for almost giving Eri and Satsuki a caffeine high.

Just the thought of two hyperactive six-year-olds was scarier than anything that Halloween could produce.

CHAPTER END

A bit shorter than the other chapters, but the next chapter should make up for it with how I have it planned out. As for what the next Disney movie is, all I'll say is that it's a Disney Princess movie not named Frozen . That should narrow it down.

For Eri and Satsuki's costumes, they're based off of Izuku and Tsuyu's official Halloween costumes respectively.

The Little Mermaid

"I'm still amazed that we were able to set this whole thing up at the last minute."

"Just goes to show how far you'll go to make Eri happy, Izuku-kun~"

"S-Still, planning a trip to the aquarium is not easy."

The hero students were currently spending their Sunday visiting the Okuto Aquarium on Okuto Island. As to why they had all taken this trip...

Eri and Satsuki wanted to see a mermaid.

For the final movie yesterday, Izuku showed the girls The Little Mermaid and like any little girl, they loved it. The little ones then practically begged Izuku, Kyouka, and Tsuyu to take them somewhere to see a real mermaid, to which the teens had to gently explain that mermaids were only found in storybooks. This only made Eri and Satsuki pout. Izuku, not wanting to see Eri upset, then made the suggestion that would decide what everyone would be doing on Sunday. It helped that a majority of the other teens wanted to go and convinced Kyouka and Tsuyu to agree.

The first major step was to convince the teachers to allow them to go, so Izuku went to speak with the teachers, bringing Eri with him. All Might, Present Mic, Midnight, and Vlad King gladly agreed and even volunteered to be chaperones once they heard why they were going. Aizawa on the other hand was being his usual negative self and was about to deny Izuku's request, but this was the main reason Izuku brought Eri with him in the first place. Picking up and holding out the baby unicorn, Izuku didn't give Aizawa a choice as the insomniac had to stare into the big, innocent, confused eyes of the child that's supposed to be in his care.

"I should give you detention for this, Problem Child," was what the scowling Aizawa had said, trying his damndest to resist Eri's weaponized cuteness. This only made Izuku bring the child in his arms closer to Aizawa, who eventually broke. "Alright! No detention and you hellions can go to the aquarium!"

Satisfied, Izuku brought Eri back into his arms and left for the dorms to tell the others of his success.

Next they had to tell their parents that they wouldn't be coming home on Sunday and why. This resulted in the Midoriya, Jirou, and Asui families joining in coming to the aquarium with them.

Right now, the large group had arrived at Okuto Island, where they were greeted by a familiar face.

"Kugo-jii!" squeaked out Eri upon seeing the Killer Whale Hero.

"Hey, boss," added Kyouka, giving a slight wave.

Gang Orca let out a few chuckles before he greeted his guests. "Hello, everyone, and welcome to the Okuto Aquarium!"

As some of the teens cheered, the little ones stepped forward to look up at Gang Orca.

"Kugo-jii, I brought Keiko-san with me!" chirped Eri, showing off her killer whale plushy that she brought with her.

"I'm happy that you're enjoying your gift, little one," said Orca, reaching down to pat the child on her head. He then looked over to the other child. "Hm? And who is this?"

"This is Satsuki-chan! She's my best friend!" explained Eri, grabbing and holding Satsuki's hand as the two beamed in happiness.

"It's a pleasure to meet you, Satsuki," replied Orca, earning some giggles from the tadpole. "Anyway, I heard you two wanted to see a mermaid."

The chibis' eyes widened at the mention of mermaids before they nodded in excitement.

"But Neechan said mermaids aren't real, gero!" squeaked Satsuki.

"Hm, are you sure about that?" asked Orca with a knowing look.

The chibis' excitement grew as they and the group followed Gang Orca into the building. Upon entering, a majority of the group was impressed with the multitude of large tanks filled with hundreds and hundreds of fish and other aquatic life. Orca led them down a hallway that eventually led to one of the many outdoor pools the aquarium had.

"Mizutani! Get up here!" called out Orca.

Just as Orca called out to this Mizutani, everyone could see shadows from under the water coming closer to the surface before three figures jumped out of the water and into the air. Two of the figures turned out to be dolphins, but the last one was what got everyone's attention.

It was a beautiful looking woman with long, light blue hair and the tail of a fish in place of human legs.

"Mermaid!" exclaimed the little ones. They tried to run towards the mermaid, but were quickly lifted off the ground by Kyouka and Tsuyu before they could slip and fall.

The mermaid giggled at the children's cuteness before turning to Orca. "Hey, Sakamata-san! What's up?"

Orca cleared his throat before he explained. "Everyone, this is Mizutani Kasumi, the aquarium's dolphin trainer. Mizutani, Eri-chan and Satsuki-chan here wanted to meet you."

Kasumi gave the children a friendly smile as Kyouka and Tsuyu set them on the ground, after which the children made their way over to the aquatic woman.

"Are you really a mermaid?" asked Eri in awe.

Another giggle came from Kasumi. "Yup! My Quirk gives me all of the aspects and abilities of a mermaid, which makes training dolphins really easy! I can even transform my tail into a pair of legs so I can walk on land!"

The Mermaid Quirk user demonstrated this when her tail glowed with a bright light and the next thing everyone knew, she now had a pair of human legs. Luckily, she was wearing a leotard for decency.

The chibis' excitement returned in full force as they started to babble out question after question for Kasumi, much to her amusement. Off to the side, Izuku had his notebook out, writing down notes on Kasumi's Quirk.

With the introductions done and after the little ones kept asking Kasumi questions, the large group were given the go ahead from Orca to enjoy the aquarium. They split up into groups and went off to see the various marine life that lived here, agreeing to meet up for lunch later.

Seals, walruses, sea otters, narwhals, belugas, great white sharks, tuna, manta rays, jellyfish, starfish, moray eels, octopuses, spider crabs. You name it and the aquarium most likely had it and the large group made sure to see everything. They even took in a dolphin show, although Eri and Satsuki were more excited to see Kasumi perform instead.

Then came lunch.

"Sweetie, we talked about this yesterday," said Kyouka with a soft reprimand as she gently took the fork from Eri's hand.

The little unicorn puffed out her cheeks in a pout as the utensil was taken away from her. Satsuki was also pouting as Tsuyu had also taken away her fork.

"What happened yesterday?" asked Inko, her and the other parents confused as to why Eri and Satsuki weren't allowed to have forks.

Izuku and Kyouka glanced at each other, contemplating if they should admit to what happened, but Tsuyu took the decision out of their hands.

"In the movie, when the mermaid would discover items from the human world, she would use them differently than we would since she didn't know what they were, gero. In this case, she would use a fork to brush her hair, gero."

"... We may have had to give Eri and Satsuki a bath when they got food in their hair," added Kyouka with a slight grimace.

This of course earned giggles from Inko and Mika, while Beru lifted Satsuki onto her lap.

"Satsuki, you can't use a fork to brush your hair, gero," stated the froggy matriarch.

"Why not? The mermaid did, gero!"

"Yes, but the mermaid lived under the water, so she's always clean. People who live on the land would always be dirty if they brushed their hair with forks, gero," explained Beru.

Satsuki continued to pout, but relented and promised not to brush her hair with a fork anymore, much to her parents' relief.

Once lunch was finished, everyone went to see the rest of the exhibits until it was time to head home. Before they left though, Eri and Satsuki wanted to see Kasumi one more time.

"Aw, you two are just so sweet!" chirped Kasumi as the little ones came to say goodbye. She gave them both a hug and even offered to take a picture with them so they would have proof of meeting a real life mermaid.

On the boat ride back to the mainland, the day's excitement was finally winding down and the little ones were out like a light, both of them using Izuku as a pillow. The parents couldn't help but take pictures at the cute scene while most everyone else would tease the greenie, much to his chagrin.

And all the while, Eri and Satsuki would dream of underwater castles and singing sea life.

CHAPTER END

When I started this fic, my original plan was to update it weekly. That obviously didn't happen thanks to both burnout and depression taking a bat to my skull. As for this chapter, a LOT of editing had to be done. It was originally supposed to be longer, but I had to cut out some things that I couldn't fit in naturally. For example, Mitsuki, Masaru, Rei, Fuyumi, Natsuo, and Selkie were all supposed to be in this chapter. I'm most disappointed in cutting out Selkie, because the idea I had was to have him meet Satsuki and then give her a plushie seal to match Eri's plushie orca. Satsuki would have named the plushie Lou and start calling Selkie "Selkie-jii". I might make a Satsuki meets Selkie one-shot in the future, but I don't know when exactly that'll happen.

Anyway, congrats to those who guessed The Little Mermaid . Next chapter will be based on another of my favorite Disney movies and no clue this time because this movie is also one of Disney's most popular ones, so it should be easy. When I can get the chapter out though, well, as I said I'm still dealing with burnout and depression so we'll see what happens. Also, I won't be able to reply to reviews on Fanfiction right away. For some reason the site disabled notifications for me, stating that my email keeps rejecting them and I have no idea of how to fix this myself. I'm hoping to get it fixed sometime this weekend.

Aladdin

Another Saturday afternoon, another weekend playdate for Eri and Satsuki and another Disney movie as well. This time the movie put ideas into the little ones' heads, but they would need help to make these ideas work and only one person who could help them came to mind.

"Hello, Eri-chan, Satsuki-chan. Did you enjoy the movie?" asked Momo with a smile as the children ran up to her as she sat on the couch. The children then climbed up onto the couch, with Momo now sitting between them, and then to the shock of everyone started to rub the heiress' belly. "E-Eri-chan! S-Satsuki-chan! Wh-Wh-Wh-What are you doing?!"

The tadpole answered the question, not realizing the embarrassment she and Eri were causing Momo. "You make things like the Genie did, so we want to make some wishes, gero!"

Momo's face was bright red as the little ones continued to rub her belly like it was the Genie's magic lamp. It didn't help that Kyouka had burst into laughter. "K-Kyouka! This isn't funny!"

"S-Sorry, Yaomomo, but this is actually really hilarious!" replied the purplette as she leaned on Izuku to keep herself steady.

The greenie could only give Momo an apologetic smile, while the frog girl gave her little sister an admonishing look.

"Satsuki, you know better, gero," stated Tsuyu.

"But we want a wish, gero!"

"Maybe I shouldn't have shown them Aladdin," said Izuku, feeling guilty for what he caused.

Kyouka let out a huff. "Don't go thinking this is your fault, Izu-kun. Besides, Yaomomo can end this by just giving the kids what they want."

"R-Right! S-So what w-wishes d-did you have, y-you two?" asked Momo.

She would regret the question the moment the little ones opened their mouths.

"I wish for a prince for Neechan, gero!"

"I wish for Papa to give Mama his magic seed so I can have a little brother or sister!"

Izuku, Kyouka, and Tsuyu all blushed brightly at the chibis' requests. It also didn't help that some of their classmates were laughing at their expense.

"Hahahahahaha! Suffer, Deku! Suffer!" exclaimed Bakugou, enjoying Izuku's plight.

"Okay! I think that's enough for today!" yelped Izuku, his voice cracking in embarrassment as Kyouka and Tsuyu grabbed their respective chibis, although Tsuyu had to smack Mineta and Tsuburaba with her tongue when she noticed them trying to get close to her. She knew what they wanted and there was no way in hell either of them would be her prince.

The three red-faced teens then quickly headed outside to get away from everyone else, with Eri and Satsuki squeaking in protest all the while. This left a mostly amused group of their classmates to discuss what just happened.

"You have to admit, the kids were creative in their attempt at matchmaking," said Sero with a laugh.

"I know!" squeaked out Mina. She then pretended to wipe away a tear. "I'm so proud of them."

"I bet some of us wished they tried a different method," added Setsuna with a lizard-like grin as she put some emphasis on "wished". "Ain't that right, Yaomomo?"

"Please refrain from mentioning wishes," replied the heiress, her words muffled since she was covering her blushing face with her hands.

"It's okay, Yaomomo. You know they didn't mean any harm by it," said Itsuka, trying to make her friend feel better.

Momo did know this, but it was still embarrassing. She just hoped this would all blow over real soon.

"So how were those belly rubs, Yaomomo? Bet you wish it was Todoroki giving them instead, huh?"

Of course with Mina around, Momo knew her chances were next to none.

CHAPTER END

I've been looking forward to writing this one. Aladdin is one of my favorite animated Disney movies (congrats to those who guessed it) and I knew that once I got to this one, Momo was going to get the brunt of it. I could definitely see the little ones misunderstanding exactly how Momo's Quirk works. They would see it in action and think "she makes things, she's a magic Genie!" Thus what happens here. Now everyone has Genie!Momo on the brain.

Anyway, next chapter will be another easy one, especially since I'll narrow it down by saying that it's going to be a Pixar movie. Also, it seems that Fanfiction is slowly but surely getting fixed as I started getting notifications in my email again today.

Fingers crossed that it gets fixed in full.

Monsters, Inc

The closet door swung open, but as Eri and Satsuki peered inside, they could only pout in disappointment. They then closed the door, only to immediately swing it open again, pouting once more when they found nothing.

"Eri-chan? Satsuki-chan? What are you doing?" asked Izuku, walking into his dorm room where he found the little ones.

"We're trying to find monsters, Izu-nii! Gero!" exclaimed Satsuki, her and Eri turning to look up at the greenie.

"We want to meet a monster like Sully-san!" added Eri with a squeak.

Izuku's mouth twitched into a smile. Earlier the little ones got to watch Monsters, Inc. and it seemed that they became fascinated with monsters. He was honestly glad for that since it meant they weren't scared like most children would be.

"Is that so? While I do hope that you can make some monster friends, I don't know if you'll be able to find any monsters in my closet," said Izuku.

"How come, Papa?" asked the unicorn as she and the tadpole frowned.

Izuku scooped up the little ones into his arms and then headed out of the room and back down to the main floor where dinner should be ready.

"Well," started Izuku as he carried the little ones. "If you remember, the monsters only appear in children's closets. I'm much too old for the monsters to want to visit."

Satsuki pouted once more as she crossed her arms. "But we want to meet the monsters."

"I'm sure you will one day, Satsuki-chan," replied the greenie with a small laugh. "But another thing you have to remember is that the monsters are just as afraid of humans as humans are of monsters, so it won't be easy to meet one."

The chibis whined slightly at the fact that their quest to meet a monster might have ended before it began.

"Not fair, gero."

"Out of curiosity, what would you two have done if you got to meet a monster?"

"We would ask them to play with us, Papa!" squeaked out Eri, her big, red eyes sparkling with joy.

"I wanted to see if there were any froggy monsters, gero!" added Satsuki, fidgeting in excitement in Izuku's arms.

This made Izuku laugh once more. "If you two want, I can talk to some of the others and we can try to find some monsters for you to meet."

He knew it was a big promise, considering real monsters didn't exist, but he just couldn't say no to these two.

"Yay!" exclaimed the chibis.

Especially with how happy Eri and Satsuki were right now. Maybe he could talk to All Might and see if he'd be willing to convince some of the more monstrous looking Pros out there, like Shishido for example, to meet the little ones for a day.

He'll also have to do some research to see if there were any other monster-like Pros out there that Eri and Satsuki hadn't met already.

It'd be easier to convince the girls that the Pros are monsters if it's their first time meeting them.

CHAPTER END

A bit shorter than previous chapters, but congrats to those who correctly guessed Monsters, Inc. I would have made this chapter longer, but I miscalculated how much I could do with the idea of Eri and Satsuki trying to find monsters in the closest.

Anyway, as of right now this fic will be going on an official "hiatus" of sorts and will be marked as complete. Despite that though, more chapters will come when I can. And despite THAT, Eri and Satsuki's Disney adventures are not quite done yet, as at some point I'll be writing out a side story called "Eri and Satsuki's Golden Disney Delight", which will focus on the animated Disney movies from Disney's Golden Era AKA from when Walt Disney was still alive. When that'll come out, I'm not sure as I want to try and focus on some of my other fics for a while. So apologies for that.

Also, I can't believe it's actually been a year since I first wrote this story.
